

Be Back

19. (New) A bracket for releasably securing components to one another, said bracket comprising:

13 a blade portion having a mounting formation configured for attachment to one of the components, and an elongate blade formation projecting from said mounting 5 formation; and

a sheath portion defining a chamber for receiving said blade formation and also having a mounting formation configured for attachment to an adjacent one of the components.

al

13 20. (New) A bracket for releasably securing components of a furniture system, said bracket comprising:

5 a blade portion having a mounting formation configured for attachment to one of the components, and an elongate blade formation projecting from said mounting
formation; and

a sheath portion defining a chamber for receiving said blade formation and also
having a mounting formation configured for attachment to an adjacent one of the components.